

Warners Holiday at Littlecote

It was raining when 41 members set off for the inaugural meeting of this new group. Ironically it was raining when we returned however in between the weather was very good. Littlecote House which was part of the hotel complex was very interesting to visit and use. We were able to take two guided tours with very knowledgeable guides, one around the house and one to the roman ruins and mosaic in the grounds. We enjoyed coffee in the great hall where Henry VIII met with Jane Seymour. During the four days there many people took part in the activities offered including shooting, archery putting and use of the pool complex as well as the daily quizzes (one of our group even won one quiz). There was entertainment every night after dinner. Most of the group had a day in Bath arranged by Warners. It was clearly a success, as you will have seen one more holiday is already arranged with two more proposed for next year.
