

AMBLING IN ARUNDEL

This was the first walk arranged and lead by Kevin Doyle. Here is his review of the walk round Arundel which took place on Tuesday 10th March 2020.

16 of us set off from Arundel Museum in thankfully dry weather, go over the town bridge and taking the footpath into Fitzalan Road.

Carrying on past the business units and on under the A27, then walking alongside the road and down under it on the other side of the river. We regrouped before going along past the stables and into Bond Street (sadly no posh shops in this Street)!

Turning left we made our way to the Cathedral with time for a look around.

Tom gave a short talk about the Cathedral, which I appreciated. Those who chose not to look inside had a good natter outside.

Gathering everyone up we proceeded down into Maltravers Street to admire the views across the valley and the houses which must have belonged to the merchants who used to ply their trades using the quays and shipping that used to come to the town, coming upriver and down from London via the Wey and Arun Navigation.

Going along and turning right down High Street and right again into Tarrant Street, keeping out of the shops and cafes we made our way to the riverside and stopped at one of the two gardens alongside the river for our last regroup. 16 finished the walk going in different direction at The Town Quay.

A very good walk today. Far enough for the first one of the season. Plenty of time to study the buildings along the way with some interesting facts from Tom about the Cathedral. Not too many hills to tax us. Well done and thanks. I'm sure all 16 of us enjoyed it

Mavis said: