

Bignor Hill and Stane Street

Well, 12 hardy walkers made it to the Bignor Hill car park past the sad remains of felled diseased ash trees. The higher the road got it became more mizzly with drizzle and visibility down to 100 metres. Despite that, 10 of us decided to walk. As we arrived at the Roman road the weather became clearer but we were still not able to see the coast. Luckily for us the bullocks had been removed from the field and we dodged between ewes and their lambs, so no need for our resident cattle whisperer!

We came back past Gumber farm but, in missing the one in three hill, we made a long detour which added an hour on the walk. The mizzle came back in as we approached the car park. Luckily we all survived the not so gentle walk.
