“My Life in Theatre & TV as a BBC Production Set Designer”

Talk by Lynda Kettle - Ashburton Town Hall

From my first school play I loved the magic of the theatre! My art school experience led to a degree in theatre design. My career began as a Theatre Designer continuing to the BBC and a profession as an Art Director and Production Designer. A wonderful profession for 30 years, where I was responsible for the set design of many popular television programmes such as “Angels”, “Howards’ Way”, “Two Point Four Children” as well as quiz shows, plays, light entertainment and children’s programmes.

After leaving the BBC, I continued an artistic pursuit, establishing a studio at the Canalside Craft Centre, Stoke Prior from where I ran my art gallery, art workshops and gave tuition. Having recently moved to Devon I have now established a new art studio and gallery called Loft Studio, Libra Court, Fore Street, Sidmouth.

I work in various media, including pastel, watercolour, acrylic and oil and I have exhibited my paintings at numerous galleries in the Midlands and in London.

I give a presentation on my experiences for which I bring along photographs, press cuttings, drawings and models of some of the many television programmes that I have designed.
