Dartmoor's Industrial Archaeology
& how Nature is Taking Back Over
Talk by Emma Cunis
Ashburton Town Hall

Humans have manipulated Dartmoor to suit our needs for thousands of years. This talk focuses on the success and failures of some of the entrepreneurs quarrying for granite and china clay; streaming or mining tin, copper, arsenic, and silver; making ice, lime, glass and gunpowder; and digging peat. With just a few mines/quarries currently in operation, nature has swiftly taken back over the old sites so that's it's easy to miss them or not know they are there.

Non-members are welcome to attend our talks, £4 payable on the door which includes Tea, Percolated Coffee & biscuits from 2.15 pm
