

Wild Things Visit Report, Humber Country Park, February 2022

Seven stalwarts showed up for our first visit of the year and were rewarded by a glorious sunburst just as we approached the river from the Country Park.

We repaired to the hostelry for a warming drink after a chilly wander.

We didn't see much exciting wildlife but did enjoy exploring the geology and history of the quarry and two of our members recalled their childhood days playing in what was then a wilderness (and a forbidden no-go area, had their parents known they were there). It was lovely to have two new members with us.

Above: tree roots in the quarry walls.

Left: Mervin investigates a mystery resupinate fungus

Over: Velvet Shank (Flammulina velupites); wild clematis Traveller's Joy (Clematis vitalba); Humber Bridge from the Inn.

Photos Kath and Helen

