

RESEARCH RECRUITMENT

Are you 18-80 years old and healthy?

You may be eligible to participate in our study at the Centre for Human & Applied Physiological Sciences, King's College London.

What are we investigating?

The ability to perform two tasks simultaneously and whether this changes with age, sleep, physical activity levels or cognitive ability.

Why are we interested in investigating?

Older age may impact on the ability to divert attention between specific tasks such as walking and talking simultaneously. Problems with this are associated with balance impairments and fall risks.

What will be required from you?

You will be required to complete a short screening questionnaire and attend our research laboratory for a single test session which will last approximately 2 hours.

Whom to contact if you are interested?
