

This proved to be a gripping description of life in Germany in the years immediately following the end of the war, exploring the attitudes and behaviours of both the German people and those from the Allied nations. It encompassed not only strategic decisions made by those in power but, importantly, the experiences of ordinary people, making extensive use of a range of source material. We were all taken aback by how little we knew about this period of history, within living memory.