About the Project

The recording of the monumental inscriptions inside and outside the church was undertaken by Jane Moelwyn-Hughes and Toni Smith. All care has been taken to ensure accuracy of the transcription, however a visit to the church or churchyard to check with the original inscriptions is recommended.

Words from some inscriptions were unable to be read for reasons such as broken stones, writing worn away through time etc., and so some blank spaces may occur in the transcriptions. The aim was to record the words exactly as they are found on the stone – so variations in spelling are a common occurrence.

Some of the very old graves were transcribed and published in 1798 in a book called ‘The History and Antiquities of Leicestershire’ by Nichols and this can be seen at the County Record Office. Where the script was found to be unreadable, a few words may have been taken from these transcripts and identified in [] brackets to help the researcher.

These recordings are also posted on the Leicestershire Villages Web Site – under the village of ‘Wistow’.

The Village of Wistow

John Nichols, in his 'The History of Antiquities of the County of Leicester' (published in 1798) suggested that, in ancient writings, Wistow was known as Wystanesto, Wystanstow, Wystantowe or Wistanton, meaning a reputed saint to whom the church is dedicated. It is bounded by Great Glen, Kibworth and its own hamlets of Fleckney, Kibworth and Newton Harcourt. It is situated some 7 miles from Leicester and almost the same distance from Market Harborough, between the Harborough and Welford roads to London.

In 1814, Wistow was inherited by the King's Physician, Dr. Henry Vaughan, who had, five years previously, on being created a baronet, changed his name by act of Parliament, to Halford in the confident expectation of his inheritance. He was great grandson of Sir Richard Halford, 5th Baronet, through his maternal grandmother.

Sir Henry made extensive improvements to the property of Wistow, and created the lake, at the same time diverting the road around it. He was responsible for the Georgian restoration of the church, as can be seen by the initials on the rainwater heads outside.

The Church of St Wistan

In 1798 was written: 'The church stands about 200 – 300 paces from Wistow Hall and is a light airy building. It consists of a tower in which are three bells, a nave and chancel, both of one pace, and an elegant North Chapel abutting against the north wall of the nave from which it is separated by handsome iron balustrades near the pulpit. The pulpit is of handsome paneled oak as are also the pews and the east end of the altar, which is gilt, and the Commandments neatly painted in black'.

It is thought that the box pews and reredos were added in the middle of the eighteenth century, together with the fine wrought iron altar rail and gate, which are probably the work of Robert Bakewell of Derby.

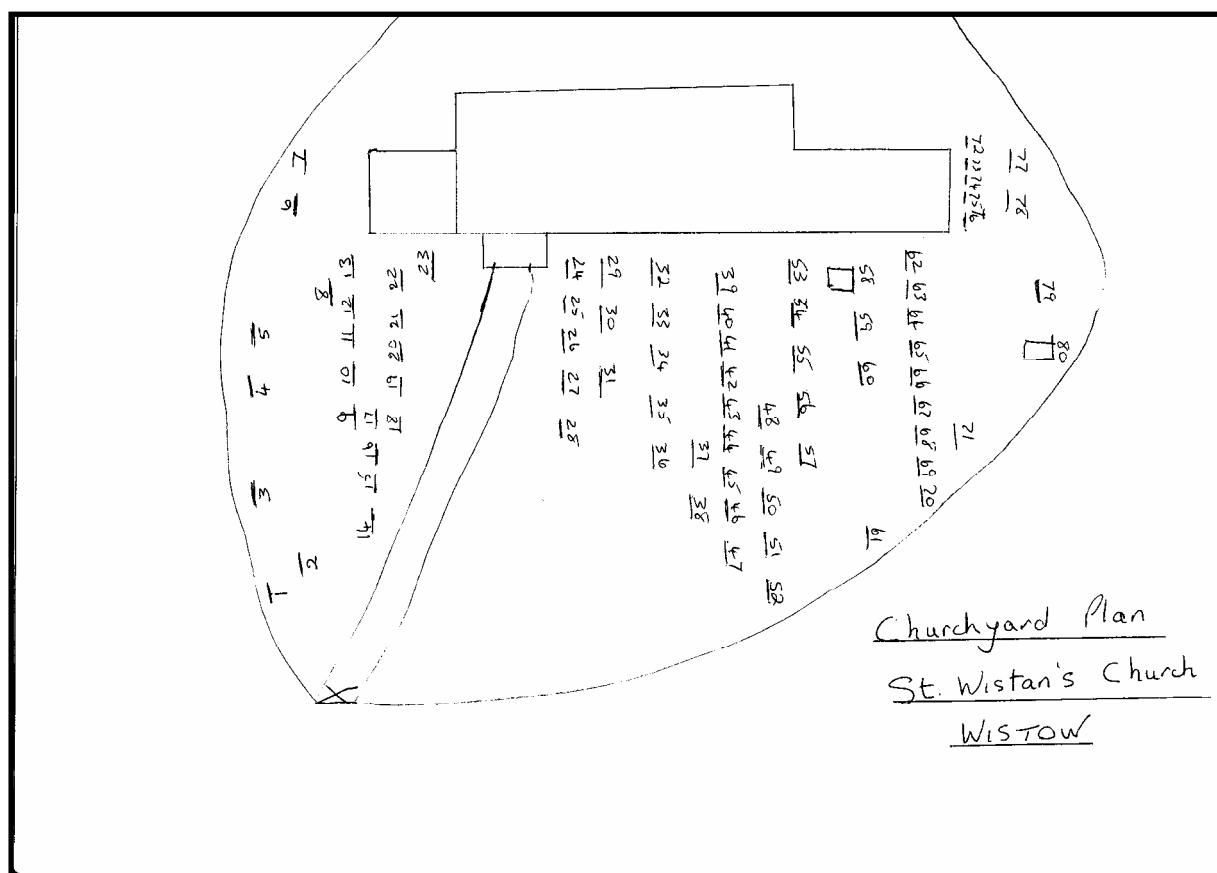

The churchyard was in use up until 1873, when burials ceased because of the danger of flooding. Records show that the church has been flooded three times to a depth of three feet in 1588, 1609 and 1618, and no doubt at intervals to this day to a lesser extent.

Up until recently, it was only possible to toll and not peal the three ancient bells in the tower due to the unsafe state of the old wooden bell frame. A grant from the Millennium Bell Fund, together with grants and fundraising, there is now a peal of six bells and a new bell-frame below the old bell frame. The three new bells were cast and installed by Taylors of Loughborough. The inscription reads: '2000 years of Christendom' and 'Allen, Bale and Gilbert families'.

The above information is taken from John Nichols 'The History of Antiquities of the County of Leicester' (published in 1798) and from the very informative booklet available at the church, with a full history of the church and the origins of the village and people of Wistow.
