

Some books to read

These are some books we can recommend. None are very expensive. I paid between £12 and £16 for these books:

1) Drawdown, the most comprehensive plan ever proposed to reverse global warming, 2017, Penguin Books

[Despite the rather pretentious subtitle, it is a book well worth reading. It show you what is being done already, and what else could be done, by Governments, corporations and other large bodies. It was edited by Paul Hawkin from 100 contributions from 70 scientists and policymakers. It contains a wealth of beautiful and interesting pictures, some of which are quite funny, and in any case, make you think]

2) 12 Small acts to save our world; You can make a difference In support of the World Wildlife Fund, 2018, Penguin Random House

[It's a very good read – quite chatty and it makes the link between what people like you and me can do and the welfare of wildlife and our environment]

3) Climate Justice: hope, resilience and the fight for a sustainable future, by Mary Robinson with Caitriona Palmer, 2018, Bloksbury Publishing

[This book is about ordinary people, farmers and activists both in the Third World and in rich countries, who are faced with sudden ruin and destitution because the weather doesn't behave anymore as it used to. These people didn't sit and wait to be supported; they fought back and helped others. One lady decided that instead of designing beauty products, wrapped in plastic, she would try and inspire a million other women to live more sustainable. Mary Robinson is of course the former Irish President – This is what Barck Obama had to say about her: "Mary Robinson has illuminated a better future for our world."]
