

Paddington Remembers The Queen

Paddington sat down sadly
In a green and quiet glade
And pulled a sandwich from his hat
What else but marmalade

He had just heard the sad news
That the Queen had passed away
He cried because he'd always thought
That she was here to stay

They'd shared some tea when he
To The Palace was invited
He remembered he could hardly speak
As he was so excited

He offered her his sandwich
Made with love and care
She smiled at him and with a grin
She showed that little bear

That inside of her handbag
There was something she had made
And that She too kept a sandwich
Made of finest marmalade

Although he was just a little bear
And she a regal queen
To take that sandwich from her bag
Was the best thing he had seen

He wondered who else would miss her
Now that she had gone
And his heart was filled up to the brim
When he turned his smartphone on

He saw that Facebook had been flooded
With pictures old and new
And that he himself that little bear
Was also in them too

Although today he's the saddest bear
That he has ever been
He will always fondly remember
The day he had tea with the Queen
