STRATFORD ON AVON

‘There’s no possibility of being witty without a little ill nature.’

1770s London, where the aristocracy’s morals have plunged lower than the necklines on the women’s gowns. The vicious Lady Sneerwell enjoys ruining reputations for pleasure, and her latest target is the young bachelor Charles Surface — why should this pretentious little rake inherit his uncle’s fortune? Together with Charles’ conniving brother Joseph Sneerwell, orchestrates an elaborate scheme of intrigue and infidelity that’s sure to ruffle all the right feathers — hopefully.

Sheridan’s brilliantly biting comedy of manners is in five acts and this new production — styled to the nines with period flair — promises an exuberant feast of big wigs and even bigger laughs.

Our trips to Stratford are always eagerly awaited and we have secured tickets for this production at a cost of £52.
