

Modern Shopping

I've bought myself a jumper, I found it on the "net."
I ordered it three weeks ago, it hasn't got here yet.
It was a special offer and competitive in price.
Delivery was extra but it really looked quite nice.

I paid for it by credit card, that gives me some protection
In case of loss, despatch quite soon, that was the projection.
It comes in several colours, lilac, fuschia, peach.
All of them looked lovely, I'd quite like one of each.

There was a choice of neckline, polo, crew or round,
But polos make me much too hot, that's what I've always found.
A crew neck is too casual, it looks a bit too messy.
My preference was round neck, I wanted something "dressy."

Sizing was a problem, I didn't want it tight.
I settled on the medium and hope that will be right.
I daresay when it's laundered it may either droop or shrink.
But Tencel/cotton/poly should be OK I think.

I've tried to chase the order up, so far without success.
When the parcel will arrive is anybody's guess.
Most likely I won't be here when the postman comes to call,
In my absence he'll just throw it clean across my wall.

I could have gone to M & S to buy myself a sweater
But the styles shown on the interweb always look much better.
I hope the parcel gets here soon before the weather changes
Or I'll need to search the "net" again, this time for Spring-wear ranges!

Sue Feltham
September 2016